The Googe Harrison Fund for UNICEF is a joint undertaking between the Harrison family and the U.S. Fund for UNICEF that aims to support UNICEF programs, providing lifesaving assistence to hildren caught in humanitarian emergencies.

Every year, UNICEF identifies countries and territories suffering from the results of civil conflict, natural disaster, and poverty – countries where children are vulnerable to malnutrition, disease, exploitation, and abuse. As with Bangladesh in the 1970s, many of these emergencies are still virtually ignored by the media and critically underfunded.

In the tradition established by George Harrison and Ravi Shankar, The George Harrison Fund for UNICEF will continue to support UNICEF programs in Bangladesh while expanding its influence to include other countries in crisis where children are at risk.
